After a fulfilling 40-year career as a dedicated and passionate teacher, Karen McDougall is now pursuing studies to become an art therapist. Throughout her teaching career, she has always been drawn to the expressive and therapeutic nature of art, and is excited to delve deeper into this field and help others through the healing power of creativity.

In addition to her work as an educator, Karen has also been actively involved in the arts community, with her artwork being featured in several exhibitions.

When it comes to her own artistic style, Karen has no set boundaries or limitations. She paints from the heart, allowing her thoughts and feelings to guide her brush strokes. This approach not only allows for immense personal expression but also ensures each piece is imbued with authenticity.
